

A generic language for defining data structures, typically used to exchange data between programs. Data models defined in this way are often called schemas.